about the identity of the printer & publisher of a publication while the former Enactment has been passed with the object a view to Govern Control over the matter published in newspapers. The Indian Act does not concern itself with Editors while under the Newspapers Regulation of 1908 no person can Edit a paper Except with the permission of the Govt. The printers and publishers have to register under the Act of 1867 and obtain permission under the later Act. In the former Case registration can not be refused while in the later permission may not be granted. The authority Exercising the power is also different in Each Case

7 As pointed out in the office note Supra, the Newspapers Regulation confers no power on Govt to frame rules

8 In these circumstances I respectfully submit that no further action
